

ABSTRACT

5 A method and system for automatically verifying a signature during a retail payment transaction is disclosed. Aspects of the invention include obtaining an electronic signature of a cardholder, and using an electronic signature verification process to automatically verify the electronic signature. The present invention further includes requiring a point-of-sale (POS) operator to manually verify the electronic signature only when an exception occurs during the electronic signature verification.